Arthur Wall, manager of the Maryland Telegraph Company, and Percy Pumphrey, who has the title of the property at the Kenilworth poolroom, were this morning held in $500 bail each by Justice Behrend, at Chesapeake

Allen W. Mallery took the stand as the prosecuting witness. Mr. Mallery said that he could not swear that bets were being made at Kenilworth.

Sufficient evidence was produced, however, to show that all the accessories of a poolroom were in vogue there and that telegrams bearing racing information were continually displayed. The defense entered a plea but Justice Behrend considered the preliminary hearing sufficient evidence to hold the case for the next term of the grand jury.

Mr. McGraw then phoned the Public Printer, who at first said it was too late, as the contract was closed. However, he finally held it up on the ground that the requisition had not been prepared for the machines.

The afternoon session was convened at 2 o'clock.

The Mergenthaler advocates are said to look with favor on the contemplated introduction of Miss Hattle Jewett, of the Gazette division, as a witness. Miss Jewett holds the record in the office for Lanston composition.

The effort will probably be made to prove by her testimony that the Lanston machine is capable of the greater speed. This will afford an opportunity for offering expert testimony in rebuttal.

The Mergenthaler attorneys will then probably call Edgar M. Trainham. A Mergenthaler operator in the job division. He recently accomplished the remarkable feat of turning out 105,750 ems of finished product in eight-hours.

Father Thinks She May Have Gone With Theatrical Company and Changed Her Name.

The answer, it was said, seems obvious.
The board is intrusted with the duty of guarding the schools and their interests. Should these things demand the discharge of a single man, that discharge should follow.

Margaret Lloyd, fifteen-year-old daughter of Samuel Lloyd, who keeps a lunch room at 1233 Seventh street northwest, has been missing from her home since Sunday

On that day she left the house with out saying where she was going or how long she would be gone. The last seen of her was Sunday afternoon when a friend of the family saw he at Chesapeake Beach in company with another girl of about her own but whose name is not known. After this all trace of her has been lost, and Mr. Lloyd has become atarmed about

It is thought by the family that if she to think that his daughter has gone with a theatrical company, though he fears she may have been carried away:

The girl is described as being large for her age, about five feet two inches in height. She has brown hair and deep blue eyes. When she left home she wore a white turban hat, white China silk waist, blue skirt coming only to her shoe tops, and low shoes. She is remarkably pretty.
